New regulated qualification in Social Pedagogy

Crossfields Institute, ThemPra Social Pedagogy, Jacaranda and the Social Pedagogy Professional Association (SPPA) are delighted to announce the launch of the new Ofqual regulated qualification in Social Pedagogy.

Crossfields Institute Level 5 Diploma in Social Pedagogy is now open for registrations.

Social pedagogy connects care and education through relationship-centred practice. Its central idea is that each person has inherent potential, is valuable, resourceful and can make a meaningful contribution to their wider community if we find ways of including them.

This qualification provides an excellent professional development opportunity for people working in care and education settings across the age range, particularly at senior practitioner and manager level. It is designed to enable experiential learning, to support individual and group reflection processes and to create dialogue between learners by drawing on their knowledge and experience. Learners will explore how they can apply the principles and theories in their practice to positively impact on the people they support, the team and organisation within which they work.

ThemPra is a social (pedagogical) enterprise supporting the sustainable development of social pedagogy through a range of courses, organisational capacity building and whole-systems strategies. www.thempra.org.uk

Jacaranda supports the development of social pedagogy via learning and development, publication and the recruitment of social pedagogues. www.jacaranda-recruitment.co.uk

The Diploma has been developed in line with the SPPA Standards of Occupational Proficiency and the Standards for Education and Training.
